Leading patient safety efforts

Are you responsible for leading safety efforts in your organization? If so, don’t miss “Leading a Culture of Safety: A Blueprint for Success,” an evidence-based resource developed by the American College of Healthcare Executives and the National Patient Safety Foundation’s Lucian Leape Institute. You’ll find tools and proven strategies for creating a culture of safety—an essential first step for eliminating harm to patients, families, and staff.

The resource is organized into six leadership domains, including foundational and sustaining strategies. Although geared for executive leaders, this document contains a wealth of information for leaders in other positions, too.
